Arrays of Objects

Circle[] circleArray;
circleArray = new Circle[3];

An array of objects is actually an array of reference variables. So invoking circleArray[1].findArea() involves two levels of referencing as shown in the next figure. circleArray references to the entire array. circleArray[1] references to a Circle object.

Array of Objects, cont.

Circle[] circleArray = new Circle[10];