

Iraq's Last Jews

Stories of Daily Life, Upheaval, and Escape from Modern Babylon

Edited by Tamar Morad, Dennis Shasha, and Robert Shasha

A collection of first-person accounts from Iraqi Jews about the lives they led in Iraq's once-vibrant, 2,500-year-old Jewish community—once the world center of Jewish life.

"These stories provide more than just the details of Iraq's former Jewish community; we learn so much about that country's larger history and culture... Without a doubt the most surprising and informative book about that country's culture and history to date."
--New York Post

"Provides for the first time a good glimpse of the history and the plight of the Iraqi Jewish community to a broad range of readers . . . Highly recommended for readers interested in exploring this unfortunately neglected part of Jewish history."
--The Jerusalem Post

"An intense piece of literature . . . cast[s] a new light on Iraq and the country's recent past, as seen through the eyes of people who were ultimately forced to flee and make new lives abroad."
--Jewish Book World

"The many reports here . . . are fascinating in their examination of aspects of Jewish life not previously well known."
--Choice
