The three cells of a corner

Solution: X must be able to force a win because there must be an X in two out of three of the cells in some corner (otherwise O would have moved 8 times just in the perimeter, whereas O has only 6 moves).

The winning move consists of placing an X nearest some corner where there are two Xs. This ensures that X cannot be blocked from a threesome in his final move.